We are under obligations to the courteous Editor of the Banner for the report of the discussion at Chattanooga. which we give below:

The Discussion at Chattanooga-Col. Hatton vindicates himself.

We were present at the discussion at Chat tanooga on Thursday between Col. Harron and Gen. Harris, the candidates for the office of Governor. The attendance was small, but a deep interest was manifested in the discussion. Our friends in that region, as they are at all other points, where our gallant candidate has been heard, especially, are in the finest spirits-more than satisfied-agreeably surprised-with the result of the discussion. We shall not attempt this morning to give a sketch of the discussion, but present below a full and substantially accurate, indeed, almost verbatim report, of a little episode which preceded the matter. We are happy in being able to give our readers this report, as it will, we hope, put a quietus upon a somewhat unpleasant discassion to which the events alluded to have given rise. We took the notes from which this report is prepared on the ground, and wrote it out only a few hours subsequently. Its accuracy can be confidently relied upon by all parties: COL. HATTON said: Fellow-citizens; Before proceeding with my reg. plar line of argument, I desire on this occasion to consume a few moments, not in the regular time which we have allotted to ourselves, by reference to a personal matter, with Gen. Harris' consent, [Gen. Harris readily accorded his consent, and Col. Hatton proceeded] I have in my hand a newspeper article to which I desire to call the aftention of my competitor. It has been handed me this mornlng, and is the first time I have seen it. Col. Hatton here read as follows from a newspa-

Difficulty at Fayetteville between the candidates for Governor, The city was a good deal excited yesterday and the day before by rumors of a difficulty at Fayetteact facts of this difficulty are related in the following letter from a gentleman who was present and took notes of the spaches. We remark only that we regret that Mr. Hatton should have permitted the premonitions of defeat, which he sees everywhere around him, to provoke him to the use of language which rendered it necessarp for him to submit to public chastisoment.

Col. Hatton continued: I have no remarks to make here upon the communication which follows. The part to which I desire especially to call your attention and the attention of Gen. Harris is this: "We remark only that we regret that Mr. Hatton should have permitted the premonitions of defeat which he sees everywhere around him to provoke bim to the use of language which rendered it necessary for him to submit to public chastisement "

There are no persons in the State of Tennessee, remarked Col. Hatton, so well acquainted with the circumstances attending that difficulty as my competitor and myself. I think great injustice is done me in the statement which I have just read, and I here call upon Gen. Harris to state what his opin-

the point to which Cel Hatton has called my attention is concerned, I have this to say. On the rank and smelt to heaven," &c. occasion alluded to I thought the strong language used by Col. Hatton was intended to apply to me personally, and that it would be so understood by the crowd. I asked respectfully, as I thought, if it was so intended. I was answered by a repetition of the language. I thought I had no alternative but to pursue the course I did. It is but sheer know whether you apply the term infamous to me justice to say, however, that my competitor mani- or not." To which Col. Hatton responded. fested no disposition to submit. There was certainly no submission in his demessor. [It is proper, perhaps to remark here, that Gen. Harris' manner, in making this statement, was such as to ed to apply that term to me." To which Col. indicate to the writer that he regarded the imputa- Hatton replied: "Fellow citizens, I repeat that tion upon Hatton as absurd]

what he expected he would do in the premisesfrankly disavowing any endorsement of the objectionable language. He expected and had given him credit in advance for as much. As for the statement which he had read from the Nashville Union and American, it was a miserable and base slander-a premeditated and vile talschoodand the author of it guilty of a malicious and unmitigated falsehood. [Applause.]

With Gen. Harris' permission, continued Col. Harron, I will proceed to give a brief description of the circumstances attending that personal diffi culty at Fayetteville. He (Col. Hatton) had used an expression in the discussion on that occasion which his competitor had deemed exceptionable He had used the same language substantially in all previous discussions, but or this occasion Gen. Harris, from his manner or some other cause, felt constrained to ask if it was intended to apply to him personally. But that point had been settled by mutual friends of bimeelf and General Harris who had decided that General Harris had misunderstood him. At this time, however, himself and his competitor were standing close together, and his (Gen. Harris') blow could not have bit him hard enough to have knocked him off the platform. The blow was from Gen. Harris' arm, and struck his, (Col. Hatton's) shoulder. He was standing just on the edge of the platform. The effect of the blow threw him off his balance, and as he was so ne ar the edge of the stand, to avoid falling he had to jump. He lit on his feet. Both went down, and a scuffle ensued. In this scuffle he caught what little hair his competitor, Gen. Harris, had, which wa not much, as the crowd would see, and something less now than it was then, and of course pulled with all the strength he had, [Laughter.] He (Col. Hatton) thought be got the best of the encounter, and he supposed his competitor thought he got the best of it. He cared nothing for that. It was a matter of no importance which was the superior in a contest in which many a plough boy might abe superior to both. Soffice it, they were separa-Red by mutual triends. Arriving in Winchester be did not feel himself in a position to make any advances for an arrangement. His (Col. Hatton's) friends informed him that Gen. Harris' friends were of the opinion that it was wrong for the affair to remain unsettled, and were anxious for a settlement. He informed them that if it could be honor ably adjusted he had no objection. Gen. Zollicoffer and Dr. Kelly of Nashville, and A.S. Colyar, Eeq. of Shelbyville, on his own behalf, and three gentlemen on behalf of Gen Barris, undertook to arfange the matter. They said Gen. Harris had misunderstood his (Col. Hatton's) language, and that he (Col. Hatton) must have miscoustrued Gen. Harris' manner. He may have done so. He had made the same speech at Winchest r, Gen Harris said in stronger terms. G n. Harris on that occasion objected to my larguage again, remarking that he thought their personal misunderstanding had been settled. He replied, substantially, as follows: . I too thought the matter between us settled by our friends. I understood that it had been decided by them that the denunciation of a doctrine, was not the denunciation of its advocate, I have here to-day denounced as infamous, the doctrine of

committee of our triends have decided that in so doing I did not denounce you personally.

He hoped that the matter was now finally disposed of as between himself and Gen. Harris, and would not be necessary to allude to it again.

Gen. Harris said he did not understand the circumstances exactly as Col. Hatton had related them. As to which got the better of the scuffle, was a matter of the smallest importance. He was standing very near Col. Hatton, but it was his clenched hand that struck and not his arm. Both were doubtless somewhat excited. If Col. Hatton had relieved him of any of his locks, scarce as they were, he had not charged him with them. [Laughter] His recollection was, however, that when separated, his competitor was across the bench, and himself on top. At Winchester his personal friends surrounded him, and said the difficulty was to be regretted. Mr. Hugh Francis, of Winchester, said to him that Mr. Colyar [not on behalf of Col. Hatton, however, but on his own responsibility,] had expressed to him an anxiety to have the difficulty settled, and Mr. Francis asked him [Gen. Harris,] what he had to say. He replied that he had nothing to say. He thought he was in the right. Gen. G. P. Smith, Hon, G. W. Jones, and Mr. F. C. Dunington, were then deputed to confer with Col. Hatton's friends. They reported their decision just before we went to the stand, substantially as Col. Hatton has stated it. He was astonished, however, to hear Col. Hatton use the same language to which he had objected, and he asked him again if he intended it as personal. He replied substantially, I too, &c., [repeating some of Col. Hatton's remarks as quoted above.]

Col. Hatton here laughingly remarked that the only point they differed materially about was as to which was on top. Gen Harris thought he was on top, and he (Hatton) thought he was on top. regular debate, and which refers to a personal [Laughter,] He desired to state, however, that he had made no advances for a settlement. He thought he was right then, and thought so yet. The committee had decided that the denunciation of a principle was not the denunciation of its ad-

> The explanations passed off in the best spirits, and left the crowd in an excellent humor.

We have no space this morning to allude to the discussion. The crowd was small, owing to local circumstances, and the usual time allotted to the debate was curtailed by both the gentlemen. We may say, however, that our opinion, drawn from reports as to the relative superiority of the two gentlemen in the conduct of the or avass, is confirmed in favor of Col. Hatton by atual observation.

We republish the following statement for the purpose of supplying a material omission that occurred in printing it vesterday. the people here assembled, and also the attention of The words "infamous doctrine," in the first ately nobody was killed. quotation in the second paragraph were left out, inadvertently, by the printer:

A Statement to the Public.

The undersigned, acting in the capacity of mu tual friends of Gen. I. G. Harris and Col. Robert Hatton, after having fully canvassed between vile between the camildates for Governor The ex- tending the unpleasant personal difficulty that occurred during their discussion at Fayetteville on the 13th inst., are satisfied that it resulted from a mutual misunderstanding between the partiesthat each acted upon misconception of the lan guage and intention of the other, and that, therefore, both have occasion to regret the unpleasant altercation that took place.

The friends of Col. Hatton understand him to have declared "That the doctrine that the alien, the uncaturalized map from the old world, who has no claims upon our country, no rights here, shall come to our country and rule and govern it, is an infomous doctrine, an iniquity that smells to heaven." And that when Gen, Harris enquired whether he intended to apply such language o him, after a short colloquy, he repeated nearly the same declaration, that the doctrine was infamous, and "that those who advocated it, advocated a doctrine that is infamous and smells to heaven."

The friends of Gen. Harris understood Col. Hatton as assuming that Gen. Harris favored the policy of allowing unnaturalized foreigners to vote in Gen. Harris p omptly arose and said: As far as Tennessee for members of Congress, &c., and that this policy he denounced as "infamous, that it was

Gen. Harris then asked Col. Hatton if he intended to apply the term "infamous" to him. His answer was: "Do you expect to intimidate me by coming for and asking this question?" Gen. Harris answered: "By no means; I do not wish to intimidate any gentleman; but I have a right to "Then it is an explanation that you want." To which Gen. Harris replied, "That is all that I want. I only desire to know whether you intendthe policy is infamous, rank, and smells to heaven, Col. Hatton said Gen. Harris had done precisely and those who advocate it are -. " At this point Gen. Herris struck him.
